If yes, how can we create identity and sense of responsibility for nature conservation?

- More knowledge about particularities and global importance of the Wadden Sea and uniqueness of the natural World Heritage status
- More regional public relations / information sessions less closed / to use all kinds of communication channels
- Create positive emotional connections to the mud flats
- Integration of inhabitants into actions (including conservation) / a more participative way
- More dialogue: participation of the inhabitants into strategy and concept development
- Added value: residents must benefit from the World Heritage site

Where do you see gaps in the marketing of the Wadden Sea?

- Insufficient information in the tourist resorts / marketing of the Wadden Sea and World Heritage status is not remarkable on the sites and is missing among the tourism stakeholders
- Lack of information in customer service
- Internet offers expandable: findability & offering of the NP-sites
- Addressing of international guests is missing (DK, Dutch, GB)
- Language problem / lack of multilingualism on site
- Win residents as multipliers
- Single destinations / „Lighthouses“ are too much in the spotlight
- Only little attention to the Wadden Sea's potential as destination for health tourism

Impact of the World Heritage status on the tourism development in the Wadden Sea Region - What potential for conflict do you see?

- By marketing reason for the world heritage recognition in the background (global uniqueness of the ecosystem)
- Selective congestion of the Wadden Sea in hot spots
- Risk that too many different levels of quality and sustainability will be combined under the label "World Heritage"
- Danger of using World Heritage only as an advertising label, ignoring obligations to >> too large visitor numbers vs. sustainability >> unguided mass tourism

Gaps and action

- Gaps in the internal marketing
- Cross-border marketing cooperation is only at the beginning
- Marketing is operated mainly in the domestic market
- No brand products to promote the WH Wadden Sea
- Lack of quality of service and quality of offer: tackle this challenge by qualification projects – have to be continued
- No common environmental label system / public private partnership models for natural World Heritage partners
- Training courses on sustainable tourism and World Heritage Site must be further developed and expanded

10 YEARS 2001-2011

- Common visitor management system, including common corporate design and content is missing
- Visitor centers need to be taken up to date regarding the information and interactive services about the Wadden Sea
- Sustainable transport links must be strengthened in all regions
- Different bases for tourism statistics in all three countries >> no comparability
- Market analysis focus on different markets with different source trends and customer behavior >> no comparability

- No regular standardized questionnaire that covers the entire Wadden Sea
- And lack of specific knowledge about foreign markets in terms of nature tourism, motivation and behavior of target groups & market potential (DK, D, Dutch)
- Lack of specific knowledge to other international markets, which also show potential to visit the Wadden Sea
- World Heritage theme is not yet integrated into all education programs and visitor centers >> exhibitions, interactive games & school programs must be developed in different languages

- World Heritage issues must be more integrated into the IWSS (International Wadden Sea School) and available to all information centers.
- There is no common educational material regarding the World Heritage-theme that could be used in all schools to learn about the whole Wadden Sea area.
- The Wadden Sea is not yet integrated into the curriculum, field trips to the World Heritage Site should be part of the lesson.

Strategic guidelines for the tourism strategy

- Develop a set of core principles for the tourism activities in the entire Wadden Sea region
- Use of World Heritage status as a "brand" for companies, public bodies and communities
- Raising the profile and identity of the Wadden Sea through awareness campaigns on external market
